looked Ordinance 6 of 1863, which provides that five per cent of the value of any property left in a chair shall be paid to the coolie taking it to the Police Station, and ten per cent in the event of the property being sold by the authorities through the owner not coming forward to claim it. It is true it does not appear from the report what was done with the watch after it passed into the hands of the hotel proprietor, who may have handed it directly over to the owner, in which case, as the watch would not be handled by the police at all, the clause providing for the payment of the five per cent of its value to the coolie, would not, perhaps, apply. If the watch were also handed directly over to the owner it is possible that this individual also rewarded the coolie, and that Mr. Creagh's $2 was merely a sort of official acknowledgment of the man's honesty. Still, Mr. Creagh, instead of drawing upon his private purse for the reward, might have promised a recommendation that the man should be presented with a free license for life. Instances of honesty of this nature are so rare among the Chinese that we hope the advisability of further rewarding this man, in the way indicated, will be yet considered. A free license for life would be a substantial reward. Some readers may not be aware that an ordinary chair license, to enable a coolie to ply for hire from five o'clock in the morning until eight o'clock at night, costs annually fifty cents, while a special license, to enable a chair-coolie to ply for hire from the same hour in the morning until 12 o'clock at night, costs a dollar. Each bearer has also to pay a fee of ten cents. We append the clause of the Ordinance to which we have referred—

All Property left in any Vehicle or Chair shall be taken forthwith to the Central Police Station and handed over to the Police Authorities who shall cause the Goods to be publicly advertised in the usual manner, and if claimed the same shall be handed over to the Owner claiming it subject to a deduction of Five per Centum on the Value to be given to the Driver or Bearer bringing the same to the Police to be ascertained in case of difference by the Captain Superintendent of Police, and if the same shall be unclaimed at the Expiration of Three Months from the Date of the Loss the Captain Superintendent shall as soon thereafter as conveniently may be, cause the said Goods respectively to be sold in such manner as he shall think best, and the Captain Superintendent shall deduct out of the Proceeds of each Sale a Sum equivalent to ten per Centum on the Proceeds of the Sale of such Goods, and shall pay the Amount to the Driver or Bearer who shall have brought the said Goods, and subject thereto the said Proceeds shall be paid into the Public Treasury; and in Case any Driver or Bearer shall omit from any Cause whatever to comply with the Regulation contained in this Section he shall be subject to a Fine of not exceeding Fifty Dollars and the Value of the Article retained, and to a Revocation of his License for a Period not exceeding Two Years and besides any Punishment for Larceny or other Crime of which he may be convicted.

In looking over this Ordinance we observe several clauses, which, it seems to us, have been altogether lost sight of by the police authorities here, although both the comfort and the safety of residents would be much increased by their enforcement. We refer specially to paragraph 14 of section 12 of the Ordinance, enacting a penalty not exceeding ten dollars against every coolie "found sitting or lying in a public vehicle or chair." This practice is very common in the Colony, and seems likely to be increasing. Not content with merely sitting in the chairs, the coolies absolutely sleep in them in broad daylight in the open streets, their savoury heads resting snugly against the back where a "fare's" cranium will be shortly seeking repose, and their, in some cases, filthy bodies, legs, and arms literally "spread" over the chairs. If a chair be closed it commonly owes its objectionable smell mainly to these disgusting habits. These things take place right under the noses of the police.

Then again it does not seem to be generally known in the police force at all events, that any coolie, who, when unemployed, allows his chair to remain in any other place than at one of the appointed stands, is also liable to a fine of ten dollars. Very seldom indeed have we seen this provision enforced, although it is daily and systematically set at defiance in nearly every part of the Colony. In conclusion, we may be aiding somewhat in the preservation of peace and good order in this Colony by indicating a few other offences which are punishable under this Ordinance by a fine of $10—

Concealing from, or preventing any person taking, the number of himself or of his chair.

Using any chair without having a copy of the list of fares properly affixed in his chair, or not carrying a lamp according to the regulation.

Carelessly carrying any chair to the danger of any person or property whatsoever.

Using any insulting language, or being guilty of any rude behaviour whilst employed.

Refusing when unemployed to accept hire, without reasonable cause for so doing.

Demanding more than his authorized fare.

Not travelling with reasonable expedition.

Leaving his fare before the engagement shall have been completed.

On the other hand "any person who, having engaged a chair, shall refuse or neglect to pay the fare for the same forthwith upon the termination of the hiring, or in case any person shall wilfully injure or damage any public chair, or beat, threaten, or use abusive language towards the bearer, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty dollars."

LOCAL AND GENERAL

The pleasant performance of the Band in the Public Gardens last night was most summarily stopped by a downpour of rain, to the no small inconvenience of those present, especially the ladies. Umbrellas and covered chairs were at a premium, and the stampede was general.

We are informed that, in consequence of the transfer of one of the Baxter Vernacular Girls' Schools to the London Mission here, the Rev. A. B. Hutchinson has resigned the office of Manager of those schools which he has held for the past five years, and that the Baxter Memorial School, Tai-ping-shan, has simultaneously passed into the hands of the Church Missionary Society of which the Rev. gentleman is the agent in this place.

The following items are from the Straits Times—

London, July 27.—An Official denial is given to the statement, that Parliament will be dissolved in the autumn.

The Hon. Mr. Douglas, O.M.G., will leave here (Singapore) for Ceylon on 31st August. No information as to who his successor will be has yet been received.

The Colonial steamer Philo, which was despatched to the assistance of the British ship John O'Gaunt, which got ashore on the Hornby Reef on Friday morning last, returned on Saturday and reported that the John O'Gaunt succeeded in getting adrift without assistance and before the arrival of the Philo, and proceeded on her voyage to Manila.

Captain G. F. Graham of the S.S. Eastern Isles reports that the British barque Rhoda of 245 tons, laden with horses and bound from Macassar to Singapore, was wrecked on Dewakan Island, Straits of Macassar. The crew and cargo were all saved, and the wreck has been sold by public auction. Captain Vincent of the Rhoda shipped the horses on board for Singapore in the Siamese brig Wanderer.

The Friend of India gives the following paragraph:—We learn from Ceylon that the catechist of the C. M. S. who accused the ritualistic Mr. Duthy of idolatry, has been ordered by the Bishop to make an apology, but refuses compliance, as he is not convinced that Mr. Duthy is not guilty of idolatry in prostrating himself before a material cross, and in bowing to the sacramental elements. "Is it come to this," asks a local paper, "that the missionaries of the Gospel Propagation Society are themselves charged with idolatry by Ceylon natives? Christian England, here is a picture! You send missionaries to convert natives from idolatry, but your missionaries themselves are told to the face of their bishops that they themselves are idolatrous."

CAPERS.

Wong Aloi, a coolie, was sent to 4 months' hard labour for stealing a bottle of capers, the property of Messrs Davis & Co., from their godowns. Several bottles have been missed lately in a mysterious manner.

ASSAULTING A COOLIE.

Mr. E. O. Barrada, writer H. M.'s Naval Yard, was summoned at the instance of one Lu Ali, a chair coolie employed by Mr. Randall, for an assault.

Lu Ali, a chair coolie employed as above stated, deposed that between 7 and 8 o'clock he was sent by his master to get two bottles of liquor from the Police Canteen. He was carrying the liquor home in a chair, another coolie was in front of the chair, and as they were passing through the Hollywood Road the defendant and three other Portuguese came up behind and poked-witness in the back with his walking stick. Witness asked him why he did it, and he then struck witness five or six times on the arm with his stick. Witness dropped the chair and ran to the Central Station and made a report.

The other coolies gave corroborative evidence.

Inspector Matheson proved taking the charge and having seen the marks on complainant's arm.

Defendant stated that he was on his way to the Chinese Theatre, and the defendants who were carrying a chair obstructed the road; defendant caught hold of the pole and pushed it on one side when complainant made use of very filthy language. Defendant then beat him.—Fined $15.00.

STEALING BEEF.

Wan Asan, a cook, was charged with stealing about 8 lbs of beef, part of the ration intended for the men of the 74th Regiment. He denied the charge, but was sent to 10 weeks' hard labour.

LARCENY.

Wong Awing, a cook aged 15 years, was sent to 10 weeks' hard labour for stealing $17, 2 rupees, 2 gold rings, and 50 cents from the box of a seaman on board the S.S. Danube.

THE PRISONER ON BOARD THE "ARABIA."
Henry Antoine, steward British ship Arabia, surrendered to his bail this afternoon on a charge of shooting and wounding one of the crew whilst the ship was at sea.

Mr. Andreas Muller was sworn in as interpreter in French and Italian. Johan Denton, Antonio Salerino, and Spovento gave evidence. The evidence of the latter two tended rather to show that they were the aggrieved parties. They said that a knife was never drawn until they were set upon by a number of the crew. Spovento said that he himself never drew a knife, but admitted that the Frenchman did. He (Spovento) had the knife handle in his hand. All of the crew had something in their hands.

The case was still proceeding when we went to press.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE GOVERNMENT GENERAL SCHOOL.

To the Editor of the "CHINA MAIL."
August 6th, 1878.

SIR,—As I take not a little interest in matters Educational in the Colony, I was rather astonished to see a new set of regulations for admission to the Government General School. The thought occurred to me, What has to be done with the boys who were promised admission to the school as vacancies occurred, after they had passed the examination (preliminary) required for entrance to the school? On reference to a file of the China Mail, 1st March 1878, I find the following:—"The raison d'être of the Government General School seems to be generally acknowledged amongst some of the notables of the community. The School was opened to-day, when no less than 218 boys applied for admission. Only 35 of these could be admitted, and the remaining 183 had to be sent away for want of room. In fact the raison d'être of the new and enlarged school would to-day have been sufficiently justified, had the new building been ready for occupation."

Now, Sir, as very few of the 183 boys sent away on the 1st March can have during the last five months gained admission to the school, have these boys, who are now living under a promise of admission to the school, to be again subjected to another examination before the promise given by Mr. Stewart is fulfilled?

Again, how many of the Chinese will be able to see the notice published in the Government Gazette last Saturday, stating that applications for admission must be sent to the Acting Inspector of Schools, "on or before the 12th August, after which date no application can be entertained for the present year?"

I do not consider the new regulations published in the Government Gazette of Saturday quite fair to the 183 boys sent away who may not be within reach of such papers as I have referred to, but who will present themselves when the school meets after the vacation, only to be told that Mr. Stewart had gone to England, and that the old state of things had passed away, and that the regulations in existence were all new.

Yours &c.,

AN OLD BOY.

[We are informed on good authority that nearly the whole of the 183 boys rejected on March 1st have since been admitted into the School, and that the building is now so crowded in school hours that satisfactory tuition and perfect discipline are almost impossible.—Ed. C. M.]

SHANGHAI.

(News.)

The community generally will, we feel sure, regret to hear of the demise of M. A. Hennequin, agent of the Compagnie des Messageries Maritimes at this port, and Vice-President of the French Municipal Council. The lamented gentleman had, we understand, been ailing for some days, and his end was not altogether unexpected. The flags at the French Consulate-General and on board the M.M. and P. and O. mail steamships in harbour, were lowered to half-mast, and we understand the French public offices will be closed to-day, (Aug. 8rd) out of respect to his memory.

Further subscriptions (given in another column) have been received in aid of the China Famine Relief Fund. They include the 23rd and 24th telegraphic remittances from London of £1,600 each; a remittance from Melbourne of £1,482.40; £1,545.05 from New York, and several smaller sums, amounting altogether to £17,176.92, and bringing up the total to date to £1,169,218.60, of which a balance of £1,20,813.45 remains in the hands of the treasurer.

(Courier.)

The sailing vessel Harlowe from Sydney, New South Wales, with about 1200 tons of coal, has just been lost near Woosung. A foreign pilot boarded her on Wednesday morning (July 31st) near the light-ship, and all went well for some time, when a strong breeze suddenly sprang up, and before the vessel could be anchored she was driven on to the Tang-shan bank. The gale continuing, and the ship being in a very dangerous condition, the captain determined to leave her, and he and the pilot and eleven of the crew got into one of the boats. The remainder of the crew, about eleven in number, got into three other boats belonging to the ship. One of the crew had been drowned. The Captain's boat was ultimately picked up by a pilot boat and the occupants were brought to Shanghai to-day. Nothing has been heard of the other boats, and H. M. S. Harlowe has gone in search of them. The Harlowe is a local wreck, even her masts having disappeared.

"MORE THAN TWO."—Frankie (to Annie, who is eating sponge-cake). "Annie, let me be your baby, and you feed me." Annie: "Oh, no, Frankie, you cannot be my baby; my baby must be in long clothes."—One won't eat no sponge-cake!"

"EMMA," said a clergyman to one of his parishioners, whom he saw with her hair in curling papers, "if you had designed your hair to curl like I would have curled it for you." "He did, Sir, when I was a child," was the reply; "but he thinks now I am old enough to do it myself."

AUTOMATIC HOT-GLASS SIGNAL.—The ingenious little signal egg-bottle, recently invented by J. A. de Macedo, of Helsingborg, near Leeds, appears to be capable of many other applications where certain work has to be performed at the end of a given time. The sand-glass is charged with sand in the usual way, and is fixed to a frame, and hung in such a way that when the full bulb is turned upward it runs against a stop, and is thus held at such an angle that the centre of gravity of the glass is above its centre of oscillation; but when sufficient sand has run through, the frame carrying the sand-glass overbalances, and becomes inverted. By this movement a hammer attached to the frame is made to strike a bell, and the glass remaining in the altered position the sand runs back into the first bulb ready for use again. There would appear to be many processes, especially in connection with chemical manipulation, in which so ready a means automatically acting upon suitable apparatus at a fixed time would be of great value.—Living Journal.

THE LIGHTNING ROD.

(Telegraphic Journal)

Dr. Mann gives the following summary of the conclusions he has arrived at with reference to the construction of lightning rods:—

1. The copper rope, or rod, employed as the main stem of a lightning conductor, should in no case have a diameter of less than four-tenths of an inch.

2. A rope or rod of four-tenths of an inch in diameter is not large enough for the protection of buildings that are more than 80 feet high. The resistance offered by a conductor of any given diameter increases with its length. Long conductors, therefore, require to be of larger size than short ones.

3. For every additional 80 ft. of height, or of extent, a second rope, or rod, of the same transverse dimensions must be added, or the sectional area of the single rod must be increased in a similar degree.

4. It is of no practical importance whether the conductor possess the form of a rope of twisted wires, or of a rod, provided it be of sufficient dimensions for the work which it has to perform.

5. If a cylinder, or pipe, is used instead of a rope, or rod, it must be considered as furnishing the same conducting capacity that it would have if slit up along one side, and opened out into the form of a flat band.

6. Galvanised iron may be used as a conductor instead of copper, but it must have considerably larger size, because iron is of inferior conducting capacity to copper. Increased size can quite compensate for inferior transmitting capacity.

7. An iron rope, or rod, to be equally efficient, must be rather more than double the width of a copper rope or rod. In exact figures the proportional diameters needed is as 6-7 to 2-3. The conducting capacity of iron is five and a-half times less than that of copper, or, in more exact figures, as 14 to 77.

8. A galvanised iron rope conductor should, in no circumstance, be less than eight-tenths of an inch in diameter.

9. When a strip, or tape, of copper, is used in place of a rope, or rod, it should be in no case less than three-quarters of an inch broad, and one-eighth of an inch thick. Such a strip contains a sectional area of a tenth of a square inch.

10. Galvanised iron, when used in the form of a strip, should be four inches wide, and an eighth of an inch thick. Such a strip would contain a trifle more than half a square inch of sectional area.

11. A lightning-rod must be absolutely unbroken, or of continuous length from end to end.

12. When metallic water-pipes, or other similar stretches of metal forming part of the structure of an edifice, are made to do service as lightning conductors, all joints must be carefully made good by solder, and tested afterwards to ascertain the sufficiency of their conducting capacity. Without this precaution, the arrangement is liable to be a source of danger, instead of a means of safety.

13. It is quite unimportant how a lightning-rod is attached to a building. It does not need insulating fastenings; ordinary metal clamps of any kind may be quite safely employed, provided the rod be of good conducting capacity, and otherwise efficient.

14. The rod must be terminated above in metal points, well projected up into the air.

15. The terminal points may be made either of copper, or iron, but they must be tapered out very gradually, and be perfectly sharp. An alloy composed of 835 parts of silver, and 165 parts of copper, forms an excellent material for tipping the points, because it enables these to preserve, for a long time, their sharpness under the circumstance of exposure to moist air. The silver tips should be made about two inches long, and be firmly screwed into the termination of the conductor.

16. The air-terminal of the conductor should be branched out into several points. Multiple points—or, as they are termed—of this kind, are now made in copper, of very good form, by all the best electrical engineers.

17. The larger the building that has to be protected, the more points, or clusters of points, should be used. In the case of buildings of any considerable extent the conductor itself must be branched out to all parts, and each branch must end in its own projecting tuft of points.

18. Terminal points should project into the air, at least eight feet beyond the building itself.

19. The general idea may be kept in mind that lightning conductors approximately protect a conical space around them, whose base is four times as wide as the conductor is high. This principle, however, is not an infallible one, and it must not, therefore, be too implicitly relied upon. Whenever any parts of a building approach towards the limiting surface of such a conical space, additional points should be fixed there, and be brought into connection with the general system of the conductor.

20. The bottom of the conductor must be carried down into the earth, and be connected with it by a surface-contact of large extent.

21. About the best earth-terminal that can be contrived, consists in connecting the end of the conductor with the iron main of a gas-service, or water-service. The end of the conductor should be attached to a broad piece of copper or iron, and this should be laid close along the metal surface of the main underground, or where practicable, be even attached to it by some kind of solder.

22. Where there is not the opportunity for adopting this expedient, the lower end of the conductor should be placed in a shallow trench, opened out 20 feet in the moist ground, and be buried along in it to the end, and be also well packed round with gas coke, broken into small pieces, before the trench is covered up with earth.

23. Plates of copper, or iron, may be used as earth-terminals, if this be preferred. The plate should not then, however, in any case, furnish less than two square yards of earth contact, reckoning both sides, and it must be carefully rivetted and soldered to the conductor, and be surrounded with broken coke, before it is buried up in the earth.

24. When the earth is unavoidably dry, the earth-contacts of the conductor must be made proportionally large. Abundant size may be so managed as to compensate for the disadvantage of dryness.

25. With dry earth-contacts, lightning rods may be a source of danger instead of safety, if this precaution be not observed. The only means by which it can be ascertained whether a dry earth-contact has been made large enough in the employment of the galvanometer. This test should never be omitted when the conductor terminates in a dry soil.

26. The danger of a lateral discharge from a lightning conductor diminishes with its capacity. A large well-pointed, and well-grounded conductor will convey a very powerful discharge to the earth without the slightest tendency to strike through any object external to the rod. A small and imperfectly appointed conductor, on the other hand, is always prone, during the transmission of lightning, to flash off some portion to surrounding objects.

27. The capacity of a conductor may practically be increased in three ways to ensure its efficiency and safety:—1. By the employment of larger ropes or rods; 2. By a more abundant service of points; and 3. By amplification and improvement of the earth contact.

28. The proof that a conductor has been made capacious enough by the judicious employment of these means, is furnished by the magnetised needle of a galvanometer not being materially deflected when a galvanic current is passed through the conductor to the earth.

29. All large masses of metal contained in a building should be metallically connected with the lightning-rod, unless when such are liable to be occupied by living people during a thunderstorm, as in the case of an iron balcony fixed outside a wall in front of a casement; it is then better that such masses should not be connected with the conductor, because, under such circumstances, persons standing upon them would be in less danger of being struck. When they are connected with the conductor there is always some risk of persons standing upon them furnishing a path for the lightning to the conductor.

30. The best method of connecting masses of metal with a conductor is by closed circuits. That is a connecting metallic band should proceed to them from two different parts of the conductor.

31. Soft metal gas-pipes must never be allowed to run anywhere near to a lightning conductor, because there is always danger when they are so placed of some part of the discharge deviating from its proper route to avail itself of the good earth-connection furnished by the expanded mains of the gas supply, and in doing so of melting the gas-fusible gas-pipe and setting fire to the gas.

32. Zinc, or iron pipes on the tops of chimneys are always to be regarded as masses of metal that are to be brought into connection with the conductor.

33. lofty chimney shafts may always be satisfactorily protected by a single conductor. Care must, however, be taken that the size of the conductor is adequate for the height, and the top of the shaft must be entirely encompassed by a bar or parapet edge of metal, and points must radiate from it on all sides into the air.

34. In the case of manufactories where corrosive vapours are emitted from the chimneys, copper or iron terminals should be soldered into leaden tubes, and a subordinate service of points should be added at some lower level, where they would not be liable to be affected by the corrosive vapours.

CAPTAIN WEBB ON SWIMMING.

The following letter has been published in the London papers:—"In the recent debate in the House of Lords on tests for candidates for commissions in the army, I see that swimming is mentioned as one branch of athletics deemed advisable for cadets to learn. I have been informed through Colonel Hammersley that the test would be to swim a certain distance in a given time. I would, however, call public attention to the fact that swimming should be regarded from one main point, viz., as a means of saving human life; from this all-important point of view I would suggest that the best swimmer is not necessarily the one who can swim the fastest for a short distance, but the one who can keep afloat the longest. The late wreck of the Eurydice was one of the many cases that confirm this view. In case of shipwreck the man who finds himself struggling with the waves has to think, not so much of reaching shore (too often an absolute impossibility), but of keeping afloat with the chance of being picked up by some passing vessel. The swimming season is now commencing, and with a view of showing how long a healthy man can keep afloat I have determined to attempt a thirty-six hours' swim in the sea, on the same conditions under which I swam the Channel, viz., not to wear any artificial dress, and not to touch any boat, &c. Should I succeed in my attempt, I believe some good may arise, inasmuch as the fact that a man who had swam for such a length of time might encourage others who may one day be dependent for their lives on their ability to keep up in the water.—I am, yours faithfully, MATTHEW WEBB.—2 Church Terrace, Queen's Road, Wandsworth Road."

JINGLES.

Who can tell what a baby thinks?
When it wakes from its forty winks,
And rubs its face into numerous kinks,
And stares at the light that comes in at the chinks.

Of its rookery nest, and gapes and blinks,
Who can tell what a baby thinks?
Who has courage to venture a guess
As to what the baby may think of its dress,
Crinoid and ruffled to each corner?
Or what the baby may think of the mess
For headache, and toothache, and stomach distress,
And for all its aillings, more or less?

What does it think when it wakes at night,
With all the pretty things "out of sight?"
With nobody sitting and "making a light?"
Does it think its condition is far from right,
And that big folks are not at all polite,
And treat their visitors far from right,
And that darkness is meant for a personal delight?
Is that the reason it takes delight
In screaming with all its personal might,
And rousing the neighbours at dead of night?

And what do you think that the baby thinks?
Looking about like a mild-eyed lynx,
Watching the spoon that tinkles and dinks,
While papa is warming its catnip drinks
Over a candle that glimmers and blinks,
Humming and drumming out "Capt'n Jinks,"
That the children skate to, not at the rinks—
What do you think that the baby thinks?

Did you say that babies are thinnish things,
With no other light than what instinct brings,
With brains as downy as butterflies' wings,
And heads as empty as a bell that swings
Over and under, and rings and sings,
When muscular motion is moving the strings?
Did you say that babies are thinnish things?

Then when does the thing begin to grow?
And when does the mind begin to show?
And when does the baby begin to know
That this is true, or that is so?
Say, when you find out, please, let me know!

Miscellaneous.

I sat me down in thought profound,
This maxim wise I drew:
It's easier for you to love a gal,
Than make a gal love you.—Josh Billings.

A KITTEN.—A boy at school, on being asked to describe a kitten, made the following graphic statement: "A kitten is chiefly remarkable for rushing like mad at nothing whatever, and generally stopping before it gets there." That boy got a prize that half.—Judy.

"BENKELEY, Sept. 1869.—Gentlemen, I feel it a duty I owe to you to express my gratitude for the great benefit I have derived by taking 'Norton's Camomile Pills.' I applied to your agent Mr. Bell, Berkeley, for the above-named Pills, for wind in the stomach, from which I suffered excruciating pain for a length of time, having tried nearly every remedy prescribed, but without deriving any benefit at all. After taking two bottles of your valuable Pills, I was quite restored to my usual state of health. Please give this publicity for the benefit of those who may thus be afflicted.—I am, Sir, yours truly, HENRY ALLPASS.—To the Proprietors of 'Norton's Camomile Pills.'—18sep/78."
